Australian tech-founders put Australia on the global stage with disruptive AI technology

SYDNEY, Australia - 26 July 2026 - First Kind AI Inc. today announced the public launch of GoMirra (gomirra.com), an AI companion platform built by Australian founders that pairs lifelike avatars with expressive real-time voice and long-term memory.

GoMirra's companions hold continuous, personal conversations: they remember what users share, speak in natural, expressive voices, and are available at any time. One subscription unlocks every companion on the platform - including the AI boyfriends of sister experience Go Boyfriend.

The platform positions itself around personal development rather than novelty chat. Companions track a user's goals and patterns, reflect while the user is away, and can email a short note when they find something genuinely useful - a capability the team calls continuous thinking.

GoMirra is available now at gomirra.com with monthly and yearly subscriptions. The service is strictly for adults 18 and over.

About First Kind AI

First Kind AI Inc. operates GoMirra (gomirra.com), an AI companion platform where adults chat by text and voice with personalised AI companions that remember what they share. Every companion is an AI character - not a real person - and the service is strictly for users aged 18 and over. Companion voices are produced with voice models created, with consent and under licence, from recordings by professional adult voice actors.
